

Reminiscence: Dr. Arnold H. Anderegg

Ph.D. 1950 (Roger Adams)

Students in the late forties had a mechanical method for controlling the pigeon population around Noyes Lab. They would use a long piece of glass tubing that a piece of chalk would fit into, open the windows and shoot pigeons in the open quadrangle between the sections of Noyes Lab. Saturday was when Dr. Adams would show up in the lab. One Saturday, when Dr. Anderegg was the "gunner", Dr. Adams came in, just shook his head and said "nice afternoon boys".
